Introduction

Quiz results are set to auto-publish once a quiz has been completed; you can disable this or modify what displays when a student submits, or even set a date in the future for release of correct quiz responses.

Method

1) Navigate to the relevant quiz within your module and open the quiz settings using the Edit option. Within the settings, go to the Evaluation & Feedback section in the right-hand panel.

2) If you do not want the results to auto-publish (such as if you have quiz questions that require manual grading, for example the short or long answer questions), you can uncheck the auto-publish attempt results immediately upon completion box.

Alternatively, if all the quiz questions are auto-graded and results are to be released upon completion, leave this box checked and you then need to choose what will be displayed to students when they submit their quiz.

3) Further down this section, under the heading When published, display to learners, the Attempt grade is also automatically selected. Uncheck this if you wish to keep this hidden from the students.

4) The dropdown underneath that then determines what information is shared with the students upon completion of the quiz, from nothing at all (No questions), to questions answered incorrectly, with or without the correct answers, to all questions, with or without the correct answers.

When published, display to learners:

5) Next in this section, there is an Customize Quiz Results Displays link. Clicking this will open a new window; select the + Additional View link to view more options.

6) This will display a series of options, outlined below.

- Under the Display Date heading, choose a date and time when you want the information selected in this window to become available to students.
  This allows you to automatically release additional information after the students have submitted their quiz at a set date. This might be useful if you have a quiz running asynchronously within a window of time, to release the correct quiz answers to the students after the window for completing the quiz has passed.

- The Custom Message text box allows you to add an accompanying message with the release of the additional information.

- The Questions dropdown has a number of options, similar to those under When published, display to learners heading on the main quiz settings page, allowing you to show students all questions or only those they answered correctly or incorrectly.

  If you had set No questions on the main quiz settings page, here you have the option to release all correct responses, along with the student's responses.

- Finally, the Statistics heading has check boxes to display the class average or grade distribution, if you wish.

7) When you have made all the appropriate selections within this section, click Create and then OK to close the window and return to the main quiz settings page.

8) Complete all other quiz settings and select Save.
