“There needs to be role models before we can hope to have a truly non-gender biased generation - keep on learning.”

I graduated from Queen’s University Belfast with a BSc Genetics (1992) and then from the University of Ulster where I completed an MSc Computing and Informatics. I completed a Doctorate (University of Ulster) which focused on aspects of learning in Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Science in 2005. Over the past 27 years I have worked as a Technical Officer on the broad application of Molecular Biology and Genetics within Human and Veterinary Medicine. I continue to develop my skills and explore new areas of learning within my role.
